Katie, 15

"My parents had a very different upbringing to what I have today. The problems they had to face were not the same as I have. I live in inner-city Birmingham, and with peer pressure, school stress and lots of other things to deal with, I think that I have a much tougher life than they had.

We teenagers have a lot of responsibility and we have to act almost like adults. We have to be mature enough to refuse cigarettes or drugs when others offer them to us. I am nearly 16 years old and I have never tried any drugs, but I know plenty of people who have. This really depends on who you hang around with and how much will-power you have to say no.

piątek, 21 października 2011 godz. 13.00

I think that a lot of teenagers are discriminated against wrongly by adults. A few days ago I was on my way home in a rush because I was late, it was very dark and I was running. I ran past a middle-aged woman and I brushed her shoulder. She screamed and grabbed her handbag tightly. She thought I was going to mug her. We need to have a certain level of trust put in us. We need to feel wanted and important, and not constantly targeted and victimised by the media. After all, if the media are constantly attacking teens and branding them as thugs, then that is the way we will act."

Carol, 42

"The teenage years of my children differ from my own. Their problems, big and small, are not the same as mine when I was a kid. Nevertheless, it is completely inaccurate to assume that young people live with not a care in the world; that life is easier for them than it was for us once. We adults underestimate the pressure that teenagers suffer. It requires a lot of courage to stand up to your friends and say 'no' to drugs. Youngsters today are not as bad as the media make them out to be. Certainly, there are those who are a real threat, but criticising them will only provoke and encourage them to live up to their image of young criminals. I think we need to show them some trust. They need to see they are important to us. This will make them more confident. "

Richard, 45

"There are few similarities between my early life as a teenager and the life of young people today. I think they have it much easier now. I grew up on a farm in Ireland and, like many kids my age, had to help out my parents working all the time. We had regular jobs in shops and on farms. This taught us responsibility and maturity very early on in life. Today teenagers only have their own problems to deal with, problems of a different kind. Their life is much easier and virtually carefree thanks to the convenient presence of computers and machines. They have very few responsibilities and not much to do. And this I think is the reason why more and more young people today turn to drugs and alcohol. Some go as far as turning to petty crime. Although it is wrong to judge the whole age group because of a few extreme cases, a teenager today is definitely more exposed to threats than he was when I was growing up."

Which of the three people
	A. Katie B. Carol C. Richard
1	1 believes that a teenager's life today is much easier than it once was?
2	says that adults don't recognise how stressed teenagers are?
3	thinks that young people have hardly any duties?
4	was thought to be a threat?
5	thinks it is brave to decline drugs?
6	is of the opinion that taking or refusing drugs depends on who you are friends with?
